Dear Friends:

Sixty years ago this April, as Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. sat in a Birmingham, Alabama jail, he penned the words that so many of us know by heart: Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.

As we celebrate Dr. King and his life and legacy, let us all recommit to doing our part to continue his work for racial, economic and social justice for everyone—knowing that each movement forward, no matter how large or small, helps to bend the arc of the moral universe that he spoke of toward justice.

Thank you to all those at this year's breakfast who have built on the foundation left by Dr. King and keep our community moving forward.

Sincerely,
